

Priscila is the Real Estate and Facilities Manager of SP Latin America at Google. She has joined the company in 2007 after having worked for Zurich Financial Services for 8 years, leading the Facilities and Services area and prior to that, as Head of Corporate Image at the Marketing Direction.

During her career at Google, she has led important projects across Latin America, launching new offices in Mexico, Miami, Colombia, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Argentina. She has also participated in other projects at the U.S.A., such as new offices in Washington D.C. and Kirkland.

She acquired broad experience in facilities and asset management, architectural design and construction, space planning, financial management, human resources, workplace services and sustainability.

In January 2011, she led the new Google office expansion in Puerto Madero, Buenos Aires, and she obtained the first LEED Silver Certificate in Commercial Interiors in the country.

Born in Montevideo, Uruguay, she holds an Architecture degree from the Universidad de la República, an MBA in Management and Strategic Marketing from UCES and a PDD from IAE, Universidad Austral.

She loves traveling and learning different languages, she speaks Spanish, English, Portuguese and French.

Priscila and her husband live in Ing. Maschwitz with their two daughters.-
